

The University of Alabama
Office of Institutional Research and Assessment

Web Programmer and Integration Specialist

The Office of Institutional Research and Assessment at The University of Alabama is seeking an energetic individual to join a dynamic office of IR professionals. The open position is an entry level staff position for a Web Programmer and Data Integration Specialist. The successful candidate for this position should have a minimum of a baccalaureate degree, three years of experience in web programming, the ability to communicate effectively in both oral and written format, be results oriented, and be comfortable in a fast paced, collaborative environment.

The responsibilities associated with this position will include the development and management of

- web-based applications to support the enhanced functioning of the University,
- intra-web tools to increase the efficient functioning of the office, and
- databases to support the operations of the office and University.

To apply, please see The University of Alabama Human Resources web page, <https://staffjobs.ua.edu/>, and look for the Web Programmer and Integration Specialist posting.